

UNISON – the union for staff working in careers services

We represent thousands of members working across careers services including career leaders, career teachers, career advisers, career coaches and career managers. If you work in this sector, then UNISON is the union for you.

Careers members are coming together in UNISON to improve their working lives.

UNISON members benefit from the strength and security that comes from people working together to tackle problems. Whether they work for local authorities, charities or private companies, careers workers in unionised workplaces are winning better pay and conditions for themselves and their colleagues. As part of the largest trade union in the sector, UNISON members have the strongest voice.

Our priorities are decided by our members, with the UNISON National Careers Forum comprised of members working in careers from across the UK. They build UNISON campaigns on the issues that matter most to you.
