

Insight into the Labour Market

Covering trends, growing sectors, useful websites, using LMI in career guidance and the labour market of the future

Overview

LMI has never been more important for careers professionals. The labour market is in a constant state of change and this has implications for career choices and pathways, both for young people entering the labour market and for adults seeking to change direction.

It is essential that all those working in the career development sector keep up-to-date with what is happening in the labour market in order to deliver informed and realistic careers education and guidance.

This Insight day will assist in that process by providing core information on key trends and developments in the labour market and the implications these have for jobseekers. In addition, the programme will also cover accessing, evaluation and using LMI resources.

The programme will be delivered by Michael Spayne, who is a labour market analyst and Helen Janota, who is a labour market and careers information consultant.

Learning Outcomes:

- Gain an understanding of key trends in the labour market.
- Identify factors driving change in the labour market.
- Identify growing and emerging sectors of employment.
- Understand the implications that labour market change has for career choices and pathways.
- Access and use LMI with customers.
